I'm a penguin! watashi wa penguin

I had dinner with friends after the New Year holiday, and they started talking about their age. One of them said, "I'm a dog. What are you, Mr. Pole?" I didn't know what she meant, so I just said, "I'm a penguin." They told me Japanese people are classified as different animals according to their year of birth. Is that true?

Mr. Pole

■■■ Did you receive any nengajō (New Year cards)? Did you notice the pictures of a dragon on them? This is the year of the dragon in the jūnishi Chinese zodiac, and nengajō designs often include the zodiac sign of the year. Japanese people sometimes try to determine your age by asking, nani doshi desu ka (What's your sign of the zodiac?), instead of directly asking, "How old are you?" It is a tactful question used particularly by middle-aged or older people.

Mr. Pole and Ms. Hirayama are talking about New Year holidays.
